Lee Killough has written a series of superior stories for F&SF that share a common theme (the future of the arts) and background (an artist's colony called Aventine). The tales are completely separate entities and may be enjoyed on their own. This one concerns the visit to Aventine of Selene and Amanda, two different personalities that snare the body of one beautiful young woman. "Sure, no trouble." She went to the desk in the corner of the room and quickly wrote the following poem, which she handed to Barry to read: .and pushed his damp hair back out of his eyes. The initials worried him. He could have coped, this time, with the old fuddy-duddy he'd had last August, but a Ph.D.? It seemed as though they were raising the hurdles each time he came around the track. But his worries evaporated the moment he was in the cubicle and saw that Marvin Kolodny was a completely average young man of twenty-four. His averageness was even a bit unsteady, as though he had to think about it, but then most twenty-four-year-olds are self-conscious in just that way..in return for a favor he did me a million years past, for it was he who made this cave for me by artful and climbing out of his palanquin, he started pacing up and down the way he'd done on his first visit; only this. everything.
