Grove, she saw it as stone walls enclosing all one kind of being and keeping out all others, like reeds, and in the distance, on the other side, rose, in a single immensity, a mountain of luminous. "Is it a long way from where you live, sir?" she asked. Golden reassured him that the wizard had actually said so, though of course what kind or a gift remained to be seen. The boy's modesty was a great relief to him. She came to the door and muttered some kind of greeting. They daunted her, these Masters of Roke, and also their presence meant that the peaceful time was over, the days of walking in the silent summer forest with the Patterner. That had come to an end last night. She knew it, but she did not want to know it. the spirit of one long dead. "There's nobody in the village could change that," she said. She looked up into his face for a moment. "The whole village together couldn't change that!" she said, and laughed. It was all right, then, though the word "change" rang and rang in his head. San's wife screeched when she heard there was a stranger at the door, crying that if San let. Her hands came away covered with blood-streaked horse sweat. "There, there," she said. "Listen. . .". He was sitting a little way from where he lay, looking at himself, although it was still utterly dark. He lay huddled and crumpled near where the little seep-stream dripped from the ledge of mica. Not far away lay another huddled heap, rotted red silk, long hair, bones. Beyond it the cavern stretched away. He could see that its rooms and passages went much farther than he had known. He saw it with the same uncaring interest with which he saw Tinaral's body and his own body. He felt a mild regret. It was only fair that he should die here with the man he had killed. It was right. Nothing was wrong. But something in him ached, not the sharp body pain, a long ache, lifelong. Irian drew a deep breath and looked at him eye to eye as they sat there. ""Only in dark the.
